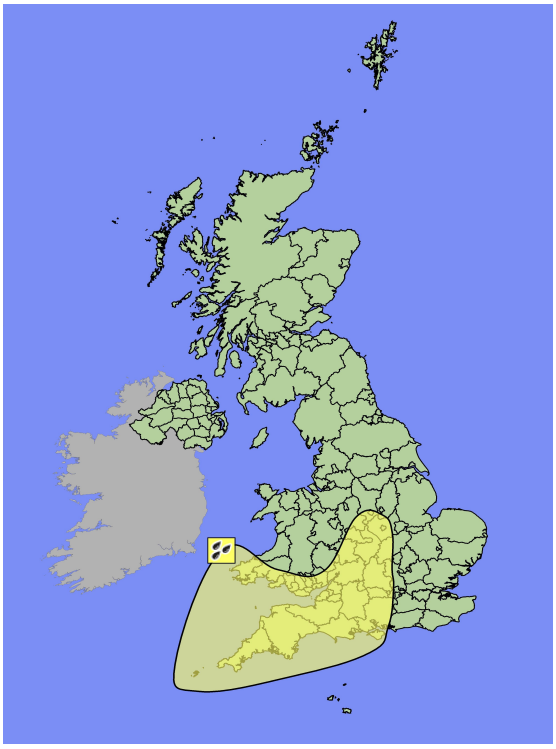
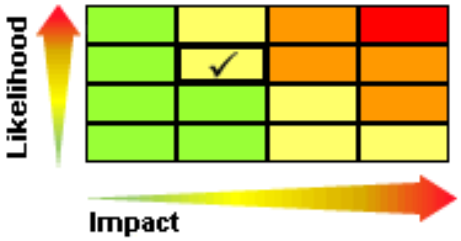
National Severe Weather Warning Service





Chief Forecasters Assessment
Rainfall totals of 30-50mm or so could accumulate very locally in a period of a few hours, though in the vast majority of places amounts are expected to be rather less than this.

For many the heaviest rain may well come during the evening, close to a wave on a cold front, though there is considerable uncertainty in the timing of this wave.

The Met Office have issued a Yellow Warning of Rain

Valid from 00:00 on Thu, 03rd Nov 2011 until 23:59 on Thu, 03rd Nov 2011

Heavy and locally thundery rain is expected at times during Thursday. Whilst southwest England and south Wales are at risk throughout, over central southern England and the Midlands the main risk period is the late afternoon and evening. The public should be aware that as a result of the heavy rain there could be standing water issues that lead to some local travel disruption.
